Comments:

1. General description of the project.

The goal of this project is to bring a photographic history of Glendale alive online for both residents and researchers. Partners include Glendale Historical Society, Sahuaro Ranch Park Historical Area, Glendale Community College and Thunderbird School of Global Management. We will digitize and identify old photos and artifacts, which will be housed on the Arizona Memory Project. Funds will be used to purchase equipment, software and pay for additional help in scanning, developing metadata and other preservation activities. Community members will benefit because Glendale's history will "leap off the computer screen," complete with descriptions of whom and what is depicted.

2. How this project meets the Legacy Project criteria.

This project is the first year of a planned multi-year effort to bring Glendale's history to the public and researchers via the Internet and other media methods. Glendale Historical Society has historical photos and transcribed interviews that go back many decades. Thunderbird photos begin with its site as a World War II airbase nearly 70 years ago. Glendale Community College began in the 1960s. Sahuaro Ranch Historical Area was formed as a working ranch in 1885. Glendale Public Library, the oldest library in the Valley, has library minutes dating back to the early 1900s. By digitizing our "memories," we will be able to make these records accessible to millions of people through our websites and the Arizona Memory Project. The five organizations mentioned are working together to celebrate our history and our state's centennial. In future years, we will expand the participating organizations. By digitizing these artifacts and putting them on the Web, the history of Glendale is preserved for posterity. We plan to work with the schools to create a curriculum unit that teachers can use with their students to further their knowledge of Glendale history.

3. Timeline/Schedule of Activities.

January-February 2008	Plan Glendale History Online project. Partners receive application for Arizona Memory Project.
February-March 2008	Write grant.
February-May 2008	Partners start going through photos and deciding what the first collections will be. All partners will apply to become part of the Arizona Memory Project. Some partners will wait for equipment requested in the grant before actual scanning takes place.
Mid-June 2008	LSTA funds are released and equipment is purchased. Needed staff is hired.
June-September	Scanning and metadata start.
October 2008	First collections are sent to Arizona Memory Project. Partner's web sites have prominent links from "Glendale History Online" to their organization's pages in Arizona Memory Project. Print publicity occurs citywide, plus in-house at each partner's organization.
November 2008- Main Library.	Moveable exhibit (3 units) will display historic photos from all partners at Glendale Main Library.
December 2008- July 2009	The exhibits will change as more collections are digitized.
December 2008- January 2009	The production of Episode 3 of "Check It Out @ the Library," touting the new digital collections.
January – July 2009	Partners continue digitizing, filling in metadata and posting collections to Arizona Memory Project
Spring 2009	Episode 3 of Check It Out @ the Library will be cablecast on Channel 11 in Glendale. We are working toward video streaming on the website, and if that happens, the video will appear there, also. In addition, the cable show can be checked out in DVD format from Glendale's three libraries.

As each partner finishes a collection, they will go on the Arizona Memory Project. They will also go on each partner's website, with Glendale Public Library having links to all partner's collections. Dates will vary.

The photographic displays at the Main Library will begin in November and continue throughout the grant period, changing as new collections are added. News releases to local media will advertise the exhibits.

Episode 3 of "Check It Out @ the Library" will focus heavily on this project, with all partners featured in the program. It will be produced in December-January and cablecast on Channel 11 in Glendale during Spring 2009 (probably March). We will also have DVD copies of the show to check out at each library. We hope to do video streaming of the show on the library's website, also. News releases to local media will advertise the cable show.

4. Project location.

Glendale Main Library, 5959 W. Brown St., will act as the marketing arm of the project. A display exhibit will show photos from all partners, advertising the project. The heart of the project is the web--each organization will have their photos; Glendale Public Library will have all photos from each organization. The Arizona Memory Project will house our photos.

5. Project partners.

Glendale Public Library, Glendale Historical Society, Glendale Community College, Sahuaro Ranch Historical Area, and Thunderbird School of Global Management
